Hey there, I'm Nynke, and I recently had the amazing opportunity to do an Erasmus internship in Belgium. Now, when it came to deciding how I wanted to get there, I thought it would be great to not only be environmentally friendly but also make my journey as hassle-free as possible. You see, being a 22-year-old student, I don't have a car at my disposal, and I value my independence, so I had to think outside the box.

That's when I realized that traveling by train would be the perfect solution for me. It offered the convenience I needed while also being an eco-friendly choice. So, I hopped on a train from Eindhoven, and after a short 20-minute stopover in Breda, I continued with a 30-minute train ride to Antwerp.

One of the best parts of this decision was that I didn't have to stress about driving in heavy traffic or finding parking spots. It allowed me to sit back, relax, and enjoy the journey without any worries. Sure, there were times when lugging around my suitcase was a bit challenging, but honestly, taking the train was totally worth it.

Have a look at some pictures I took along the way: